

ABSTRACT

A method for performing a coronary artery bypass procedure is disclosed. The method of the present disclosure is preferably utilized where the patient's vascular system is used as a conduit for accessing or reaching a desired
5 location within the patient's body. Furthermore, the method also provides a direct flow path from a heart chamber to the coronary artery.